

EVERYONE, inevitably, at some point in their lives has or will have a crisis. I believe this is realistic, not fatalistic, and often can be a stepping stone to greater experiences in life. NO ONE is immune. How we respond to these circumstances can, to a great extent, affect us for many years to come, perhaps our whole life and perhaps our very life itself. These are transcendental issues of belief or faith in whom or what we believe. I am grateful, for I get to tell my real life story with exciting outcomes. To me, they are indeed MIRACLES. Many will relate and perhaps receive some hope for their challenges: hope that, as a matter of fact, can be translated into a genuine solution. That's where I begin.

I start my story as an ordinary adolescent boy, the middle of five children in a middle class family living in a small country town west of Chicago. As a young preteen, I watched my dad suffer with a very debilitating and painful arthritic condition. He suffered at times with enough pain that it would cause him to weep to get a fork of food to his mouth at dinner time. He suffered quietly; nonetheless it affected the normalcy of a home with five young children. I know it left its effects upon me. I often wondered if I would grow up with a father, a provider, because he suffered so much. In my child's mind fathers are supposed to play with their children, to wrestle on the green grass, to skate on the frozen river on cold winter days and nights, to build a wood fire on the edge of the river, maybe even go camping. But, Dad couldn't do any of that. He would come home from work, go off to bed and await dinner.

Every financial resource, which was limited, went to seeking doctors and medications for relief. That scene of constant, debilitating pain sent a surging desire through me to one day become one of those doctors. Yes, a medical doctor, the only doctor we recognized in those days. I knew there had to be the right drug or medication which they had failed to prescribe. For years he suffered without improvement. I was designated to rub his muscles and joints to give some temporary relief so that he could get some dinner and go back to bed. I then massaged him for work in the morning. My heart yearned for him to be free of pain and in my genuine naiveté, I was certain I was going to be that doctor who could help him.

Years later my mother began experiencing neck pain. Everybody has those. It was suggested that she see a chiropractor. After 3 weeks of treatment her pains were gone, but so was the mild adult onset diabetes.

MIRACLE #1: Her diabetes was supposed to be incurable; nevertheless she lived decades after that one episode and no longer suffered with diabetes or any of its symptoms. It was then that she began maintaining much better health from that chiropractor's regular care. Eventually, the chiropractor told her to bring in her husband.

MIRACLE #2: Following a round of chiropractic adjustments with some diet and food recommendations, my father actually began to feel and act better. His behavior and disposition improved. He actually went from weeping in pain to laughing and telling jokes at the dinner table. Eventually, the chiropractor told my dad to bring me in to share what he was doing and encourage me to consider chiropractic as my profession. By this time I was finishing high school and thinking seriously about my goal in medicine.

In 1963, I enrolled at Logan College of Chiropractic in St. Louis, Missouri. Understandably, I was uncertain of this strange system of health care. I wasn't brainwashed; I was ignorant. But I could not ignore my own family's experiences, much less deny their benefits. I knew what I had to do. I felt God could be leading me into a profession that was grossly misunderstood and unappreciated, yet I had to commit to this new system.

Following graduation, my wife and I moved to central Florida, and raised six beautiful daughters. All of them were raised with chiropractic care with an attempt to be somewhat careful about food selections. Consequently, none of them suffered persistent colds, ear infections, chronic sickness, or the need for antibiotics. Regular, periodic spinal adjustments were paying off!

Due to my family and professional experiences, and after 38 years of practice, I am more passionately committed to chiropractic health care than ever before as I continue to see how greatly nerve supply can benefit people's health. I learned that it's not only the back pains, headaches and other pinched nerves that shut down the Life to the body, but also incorporating Clinical Nutrition to maintain elite wellness. I later received a Board Certified specialty degree in this area. Though I didn't know what God was doing, I know God's timing is always perfect... I just needed to trust Him.

In November of 2005, I discovered that I had an enlarged spleen. I then had a bone biopsy performed by a local oncologist. The diagnosis came back as Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma. This was my life threatening crisis. Following some limited conventional non-toxic therapy to attack cancerous cells, I began an extensive routine of Alternative Medicine. Now, I became my own patient! Following much research and investigation, I used Quantum Reflex Analysis, a technique to evaluate gland and organ dysfunction on the cellular level. I found heavy metals, harmful bacteria and parasites, among other critical issues, which break the strands of DNA and allow the cells to lose control. I had to get this corrected. If there was any hope, I had to get rid of these disease producing microorganisms. This terrible condition was secretly dismantling my future.

After a trying two years, with much prayer and trusting God, my immune system is up, running and doing its job! My spleen is functioning at near normal capacity and continuing to shrink. The blood counts are back in a normal range despite what is typically expected of this disease. In fact, quite the opposite, my body is functioning efficiently and the immune system is no longer harassed with toxic DNA damaging poisons.

MIRACLE #3: I believe that my body has healed itself. It may sound unbelievable, perhaps arrogant, but I cannot deny it worked. I am living proof that this cancerous infection would have slowly marched me into eternity had I not made some steps of faith, using Quantum Reflex Analysis within Alternative Medicine. I now believe God has plans for me to share this message and offer hope to others who have severe health problems. As a survivor, I encourage others to be proactive with their health needs.

Quantum Reflex Analysis

Today, many scientists believe the secrets of regeneration and healing lie not within costly medical drugs or expensive medical treatments, but in the body's own ability to coordinate LIFE or HEALTH through the nervous system and proper cell resonant nutrition.

Thomas Edison said, "The doctor of the future will give no medicine but will interest his patients in the care of the human frame, in diet and the cause and prevention of disease."

More than ever, it is now possible to equip the body's inherent, powerful electrical and biochemical matrix to speed up renewal and regeneration of our bodies. Quantum Reflex Analysis is a simple, safe, natural, noninvasive and revolutionary method of analyzing the body's hierarchy of physical needs in order to restore elite health. The comprehensive Quantum Reflex Analysis is specific in locating the causes of disease and dysfunction.

How can you tell if a nutritional product is working or is worth taking at all? Quantum Reflex Analysis is able to assess what nutrients are precisely required by your body's unique biochemical matrix for elite wellness.
